Educational Computer Clusters

The University Research Computing Group provides clusters of computers for use by students in their classes or for independent study projects. These systems are similar, but smaller versions of computer clusters used in academic or commercial research, development and decision support environments.

Recommended FAQs

General HPC Questions

Browse More FAQs

- How do faculty and students access educational clusters?
- How do faculty and students gain access to educational environments?
- What are the available educational environments and applications?
- Why would a Faculty member or student be interested in the Educational Clusters provided by University Research Computing?